Notes:

¹ Global Health Initiative (GHI): Introduced in May 2009 by President Obama, the U.S. Global Health Initiative is a six-year (FY 2009-FY 2014) effort to develop a comprehensive, U.S. government-wide strategy for global health focused on the health challenges and needs of those in low- and middle-income countries. GHI countries designated above are those that received funding in FY 2011. The GHI has designated eight countries as "GHI-Plus," highlighted in yellow, selected based on the following criteria: partner country interest; engagement of partners in collaborative health systems strengthening and support of national health plans; existence of health information system; presence in country of health programs in at least three of the following areas: MCH, family planning, nutrition, TB, HIV/AIDS, malaria, NTDs, and safe water and sanitation; magnitude and severity of the health problems; potential to leverage bilateral, multilateral, and foundation investments; potential to leverage other U.S. government development investments: regional diversity to maximize learning opportunities; and a focus on low-income countries.

² HIV/AIDS (PEPFAR): PEPFAR countries designated above are those that received funding in FY 2011. Countries highlighted in yellow represent the 33 countries required to submit country operational plans (COPs), which include the 15 original focus countries of PEPFAR I (Botswana, Cote d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, Guyana, Haiti, Kenya, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Rwanda, South Africa, Tanzania, Uganda, Viet Nam, and Zambia). The Caribbean, Central Asia, and Central America regions are also required to submit regional operational plans. Other countries listed are also recipients of bilateral funds to combat HIV selected based on burden of HIV/AIDS, but are not required to submit COPs. In reauthorizing PEPFAR under Lantos-Hyde, Congress specified that in designating any additional focus countries, priority should be given to those in which there is a high prevalence of HIV or risk of significantly increasing incidence of HIV within the general population and inadequate financial means within the country.

¹¹ Millennium Challenge Corporation (MCC): Includes countries currently receiving compact assistance and threshold program assistance. Compact assistance helps countries to reduce poverty and stimulate economic growth based on a set of indicators. Candidate countries are selected by the MCC Board of Directors on an annual basis. To be eligible to apply for compact assistance, countries are assessed according to a series of criteria and then reviewed by the MCC Board for final eligibility selection. Compact eligible countries must be those that are determined to "rule justly, invest in their people, and encourage economic freedom." Countries that are eligible for compact assistance but currently do not receive assistance are not included in the list above. Countries that do not yet qualify for compact assistance may be eligible for threshold program assistance. Threshold programs are smaller grants designed to help improve performance on specific indicators; countries that improve their performance may become eligible for compact assistance. Countries eligible for threshold program assistance but currently do not receive assistance are not included in the list above. Countries highlighted in yellow represent MCC compact & threshold programs with health and water/sanitation project components.
