Kaiser Health Tracking Poll: November 2010

November 2010

Methodology

This Kaiser Health Tracking Poll was designed and analyzed by public opinion researchers at the Kaiser Family Foundation led by Mollyann Brodie, Ph.D., including Liz Hamel, Claudia Deane, Sarah Cho, Bianca DiJulio, and Theresa Boston. The survey was conducted November 3 through November 6, 2010, among a nationally representative random sample of 1,502 adults ages 18 and older, including 1,017 adults who say they voted in the mid-term elections. Telephone interviews conducted by landline (1,000) and cell phone (502, including 252 who had no landline telephone) were carried out in English and Spanish by Princeton Survey Research Associates. The number of respondents and the margin of sampling error for key subgroups are presented in the table below. For results based on other subgroups, the margin of sampling error may be higher. Note that sampling error is only one of many potential sources of error in this or any other public opinion poll.

	Number of respondents	Margin of sampling error
Total	1,502	+/- 3 percentage points
Voters	1,017	+/- 3 percentage points
Democratic Voters	418	+/- 5 percentage points
Republican Voters	481	+/- 5 percentage points
Non-Voters	485	+/- 5 percentage points

“Democratic voters” refers to those who said they voted for the Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives in their district, and “Republican voters” refers to those who reported voting for the Republican candidate. In this survey, 59 percent of the public overall reported voting in the midterm election, which is much higher than the estimated 41.5 percent of the voting-eligible population that actually turned out to vote. Vote over-reporting is common in public opinion surveys, and is a particular concern for data quality if one party’s supporters over-report at higher rates than the other party’s supporters. In this survey, 43 percent of voters reported voting for the Democratic candidate for Congress and 46 percent for the Republican (2 percent said they voted for some other candidate, 3 percent said they didn’t remember, and 6 percent refused to say). If these responses are re-calculated based on those who reported a vote, then 47 percent report voting for the Democrat and 51 percent for the Republican. This is close to the current estimates of the national vote count of 45 percent Democrat, 52 percent Republican. The demographic profile of voters by age and gender in this survey is also similar to national exit polls.

Trends in this document come from surveys listed on the last page.

Values less than 0.5% are indicated by an asterisk (*).

“VOL” indicates that a response was volunteered by respondent, not an explicitly offered choice.

Due to rounding, percentages may not add to 100.
