THE WASHINGTON POST/KAISER FAMILY FOUNDATION/HARVARD UNIVERSITY

Military Families Survey

March 2004

Methodology

The Washington Post/Kaiser Family Foundation/Harvard University Survey Project is a three-way partnership and an experiment in combining survey research and reporting to better inform the public. The Post, Kaiser, and Harvard jointly design and analyze surveys examining public knowledge, perceptions, and misperceptions on major issues. The Post then reports the results as well as facts to dispel myths and misperceptions. Our hope is that this project contributes to a better understanding of public knowledge on major issues facing the country as well as more effective efforts by the media to educate, inform, and engage citizens in national debates.

The current Military Families Survey is a survey of spouses of active duty members of the United States Army serving at the ten largest U.S. Army military bases (excluding those bases used for training only). The bases included were Forts Benning, Bliss, Bragg, Campbell, Carson, Drum, Hood, Lewis, Riley, and Stewart. Together, these bases house the bulk of U.S. Army units that have been deployed to the Persian Gulf in the past 4 years.

Interviews were conducted by telephone between January 7 and February 12, 2004 among a representative sample of 1,053 respondents. This included 342 spouses of military members who have been deployed overseas since 9/11/01 but are presently not deployed, 444 spouses of those currently deployed, and 256 spouses of active duty Army members who have not been deployed since 9/11/01. The sample included respondents living on the bases (on-post) as well as those living away from the bases (off-post), those married to enlisted soldiers and those married to officers. The large majority of respondents (95%) were female.

The sample was weighted to reflect best estimates of the on-post and off-post distribution of married families at each Fort. To the extent that data were available, official Department of Defense estimates were used in weighting.

The margin of sampling error for total respondents is ± 3 percentage points. For those currently deployed and for those deployed since 9/11/01 but not currently so, it is ± 5 percentage points, and for those not deployed since 9/11/01 it is ± 6 percentage points. For responses based on subgroups (i.e. questions asked of only half of the sample), the margin of sampling error is higher. Sampling error is only one of many potential sources of error in this or any other public opinion poll.

Representatives of The Washington Post, The Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation, and Harvard University worked together to develop the survey questionnaire and analyze the results. Each organization bears the sole responsibility for the work that appears under its name. The project team included Richard Morin, The Washington Post director of polling and Claudia Deane, assistant director of polling; Drew E. Altman, president of the Kaiser Family Foundation, Mollyann Brodie, vice president and director of public opinion and media research, and Elizabeth Hamel, senior research associate; and Robert J. Blendon, professor of health policy and political analysis at the John F. Kennedy School of Government and the Harvard School of Public Health, and John M. Benson, managing director of the Harvard Opinion Research Program in the Harvard School of Public Health. Sample design and fieldwork for this survey were conducted by ICR/International Communications Research of Media, Pennsylvania.

Values less than 0.5% are indicated by an asterisk (*). "Vol." indicates that a response was volunteered by respondent, not an explicitly offered choice.
